Deception

by Adam Sifre

Distance.

There is no greater horror. Yet you keep it, hoard it like gold, until you are a pretty dot on the horizon, refusing to disappear.

I run to, always I run to you, screaming at the shimmer of you, fooling myself, and thinking I finally draw closer.

But you are only promises. A mirage.
Even as I shout your name;
even as I reach out to you,
I am back on my island,
and you are so distant, I must imagine your smile.