Fealty

by Bill Yarrow

tomorrow's work I wander toward a neon sine curve

I clutch my hollows The future holds my darkest fears a black gull dives the cobblestones my wants and needs I should go home the midnight dock stabs my eyes like a brick my brother's pain by hopes inflate a painter's gloves deny the clouds are not aligned