I Go Cold Keyboard at End of Day

by Carl Santoro

2 a.m. when I'm alone with you, you and your community, melting as one, as headphone nectar-Lizzie, C,S,N & Y, more... please, don't dare ask who.

Your volumes of inspiration vacuumed up into my pupils, direct line to my thought bank disguised as brain central.

I dab lightly, the key board winces heavily the monitor glows impassionately texting while head-phoning becomes serious

Excuse me, can I now ask to change my favorite childhood color from green to yellow?

Could call for toothbrushes to be replaced, damn!

Can I love dead authors? Can I love Fictionaut authors? Are you kidding me?

The headphone/Fictionaut combo escorts me eventually to a quiet pillow

Available online at «http://fictionaut.com/stories/carl-santoro/i-go-cold-keyboard-at-end-of-day»

Copyright © 2012 Carl Santoro. All rights reserved.

where I deposit words drenched in music.