Hand Grenades, or The Child in Your Eyes is Exploding the Known Universe

by Darryl Price

There is a war, but is it not In my heart? There is a war, but You are not the reason. There is a War, but we're all doing what we can.

There is a war, but it is not just Your fight. There is a war, but I Wished you still walked around amongst us. There's a War, but I'm fixing to have a good old

Time. There is a war, but it doesn't Make much sense. There is a war, but I Didn't know that and neither did you. There Is a war, but also a butterfly, fanning

The small fire that is your hair into a Perfectly delicious fragrance of summer. There is a war, but I'll recite my empty poems to the pissed Off trees if I want. There is a war, but my Own doppelganger pretends not to hear any of this coming out of my mouth. There is a war, but it doesn't have to be like this, not like this.

Available online at http://fictionaut.com/stories/darryl-price/hand-grenades-or-the-child-in-your-eyes-is-exploding-the-known-universe Copyright © 2016 Darryl Price. All rights reserved.

There is a war, but you are being

So awfully quiet now. There is a war, But I recognize it in your eyes. There is a War, but you should make a picture of It for someone you once loved. There is a war, but I'm only

Trying to get back home, aren't you? There is A war, but peace and love get in The way. There is a war, but aren't you still sleeping on the floor? There is a war, but I can't stand being anywhere without you. There is A war, but the snobs like it best that Way. But all I've got to get you Some Heaven now is a scribbled line or Two about how hard it is to be Strong, let's face it, that sucks. There's a War,you can smell it, but do me a Favor, and pay me back in kisses only. There

Is a war, but smile at me some more. There Is a war, but it has always seemed to me that we have seen too much already. There is a war; the sky's the limit, I am told.

Bonus Poems:

Signal in the Sky

by Darryl Price

They interfere plenty. I don't think that Angels care if we dance or not. We would Have felt something, that's how we think we know. They have only one station. I'm pretty Sure it's classical twenty-four hours A day. Talk about nostalgia for

The Good old days. At least we're still searching For the beat in the jungle. I mean who Sends a white horse as a nightmare to a Frightened sleeper? Only someone who thinks

They know everything. The point is, I don't Believe that believing anything makes

You better than another person. If It makes you happy that doesn't give you

The right to always declare it in my Direction like it's the only way to be Authentic in this or any other World. Blind obedience to a machine, Whether it is radiant or not, is Not my idea of a joyful love.

I'm glad we have each other. I'm thankful we are still playful. I'm happy to have an ego, to still feel the great big thrill of lust. Take your lies and stuff them. Dance on.

Pleasures by Darryl Price

The sun, or whatever it is, is falling closer. I don't think that it's going away any time soon. But here I am a man still seeking your face on every leaf. Like a forest of elegant bulbs this makes it way better; doesn't make it blow away. I don't believe in being forbidden to laugh or to cry. That's my problem. There's plenty I don't understand, but it doesn't stop me from feeling everything on and on until the end. The sun, or whatever is shining, seems to be debating what makes a dream and what is awakening, but my question is for you--will you still be love's message to us when tomorrow is the only day left on earth? The sunshine, or the inevitable squinting sky, shifts its own pleasures like a sleeping lion sometimes, but I and I must allow for the shadows of our workhorse atoms to move mountains and swing the maid back onto her silver saddle before listing over into another starry despair. We've a purpose after all in the grand clash of the majestic kitchens.