

"One, Two, Three, Four, Five, and Six," said Seven to Zero Before Disappearing Over the Cliffs

by Darryl Price

"I don't think of all the misery but of the beauty that still remains."
Anne Frank

I know. It's not quite the fun little story you had wanted to be hearing from me so soon after the last sorrowful one took your breath away. But look here now how out of more snow nothing more than frozen rain you see other people are eating their bashful clumpy ice cream scoops without making the same little annoying mistakes about doing so in public as the rest of us. But a spoon is so very vast upon the surface, my dear, so full of tiny upside down faces clicked onto mute mode and outside the dripping and dancing trees like smeary pastel landscape paintings... oh and oh and oh the sudden looping into the air of large letter writing, appearing courtesy of those fuzzy little airplanes our friends the greedy hungry sparrows, or so a bowl is deeply snoring in its circle of dreams and Available online at «<http://fictionaut.com/stories/darryl-price/onetwothreefourfiveand-six-said-seven-to-zero-before-disappearing-over-the-cliffs>» Copyright © 2010 Darryl Price. All rights reserved.

then boom boom booming in its clearly awakening state. You must tell me again please, why must you always have to hear only the loud crunching noises of the traffic of bodies racing around the room like toy drivers in toy cars? If I could I'd certainly oh so slowly pass through that frosty front window pane like a comic book ghost right now, all thin and wispy and slyly almost invisibly smiling and maybe rattle a tree branch on the way out or two just for some twiggy slingshot-type fun to be had. Oh boy. That's the stuff! That's the what that goes falling out of people if you ask me.

It makes them look like they are perfectly sick all of the time. Like they've begun to rot on the one sad side.

Hey now I do personally know some very cool older-than-me people who are amazingly beautiful still all the way around. But these sad snuffed-out candles of flesh and bone-- I can't stand to look at their lost joyless faces--staring up at the world as if they might remember something golden in a moment of instant, hot cream reverie if you'll just give them one thin minute more to ponder out the meaning's lost down a dark, dark hole meaning.

There are still things I wish I could say out loud to you but the world keeps getting in the way, blocking the sunlight like a giant hand descending from out of the clouds. And here we go again. Maybe the old gods just like that little bit of buzz of chaos every now and then just to keep the boredom from sapping whatever energy they do have left in their lightning bolts.

To
amuse themselves. You remember that? Being alone let's say and playing with the mere facts of your existence? Our own Grand One seems to have given up altogether on the amazing trampoline act for something more remote and a little less fatigue-like in the britches. No one knows where he is at the moment. Oh yes. I remember.

They, the same "they" that like to live in beauty and they are not exactly friendly about it. How does this happen to anyone exactly? Because we might want to avoid getting caught up in the same fate. They've got a lot of goddamned gall, dressing like remote, exotic birds on a jewel-encrusted limb. That's what ought to keep you up at night. I know the realities of death's crumbling knock like a piece of paper being drilled with a jackhammer are everywhere you look like blackened and oily mushrooms on a soaked forest floor, like bird stuff on the window's jutting out lip just inches outside the most sincere conversation the furnace is making within the quaking walls of home.

I get it. Doesn't matter. Inside. Outside.
The shit makes its own statement. But that's just one meaning of the darling moment.

A bird is not just the thing it shits. There is a remarkable spark of life in its eye, blinking at you constantly, trying to understand and enjoy you just the way you are.

Darryl Price 2010

Big Escape(draft version)

Oh nothing's wrong. Everything walks its own immanent brand of magic through each new day's front doors. But that doesn't mean a heart isn't sliced down the middle by some remembered sunset. We're all clothes inside the washing machine. And still you see people acting like sharks, just like animals with poisonous barbs for fingers looking for something to spear just for the hell of it. They take the most beautiful thing they can find and break it. So, no, nothing's wrong. Amid all this idiot carnage I have you pretending to have all the time in the world to find and give love. You think that those stars don't ever lie, but of course they are becoming the bells that will toll your sleep.

There you go again turning me out, living a life while I'm breaking down in my strides becoming nothing more than a vanishing cloud of dreams.

Darryl Price

Wisdom is a choice you make to not be the asshole in any given situation. I am still that child. Three reasons. I believe in love in spite of the pain and horror of the howling tormented souls all around us right now. I still think they should be treated with kindness at every turn in the road. Their violence should be met with pity for their awful sadness, but with courage to resist their best recruitment offerings. One should not let others die because of being afraid to engage the enemy with respect. This doesn't mean you don't fight. It simply means you have chosen to believe what's worth fighting for is being the good instead of going the nice. Nice can be nuts. I like to make fun. Bet you didn't see that one coming. But it's the truth. I only listen to music because it's fun for instance. I collect things. I go for walks.

I watch it rain. I listen to cars at night.

Whatever. I leave you this letter. Watch for your light.
Wait to behold your wondrous animal mythologies turning like keys.

Darryl Price

THERE ISN'T ANY SENSE

to this so let's make some.
I want you to go home happy. I also want this rope of words to haul you up to a secret tree house in the clouds. The paper itself can be both river and boat. Our purpose is the one thing they won't get. They see it as only a silly-assed floating frisbee. We know better than them.

It's the toy that never dies. Each generation gets to pick it up and put it down again. But all the players get to catch and throw. That's another layer we add to it all by ourselves.

Darryl Price

Endcap

