astral ages

by Kitty Boots

star baby suckles greedily at the Milky Way kneads and yawns like a kitten sleeps, grows wakes up to the Sun as a reckless adolescent dead reckoning, no thought to the wind or the currents marooned, unintentionally by the heart now a time of eclipses, no control over the tides the equinox approaches the harvest has begun