Portrait of the poet as midwife

by sean m. poole

Some poems slip out easily Thick and solid Well-oiled and fully formed

Others must be coaxed out

Cajoled and courted Labored over Twisted and tweaked

Brought forth with grunting and Bearing down

Pushed from the birth canal Grabbed by the ankles Slippery and dripping

Smacked on the arse Until they scream aloud