

Stupidest. Film Director. EVER!

by Smiley McGrouchpants, Jr-Esq-III

CIRCA 1992:

"I can't believe people are having trouble with this . . . I know, I know, Woody Allen's against it — but, what is he? At heart, that's right — a comedian! . . . Stick to your medium, dude, it's what you do best . . . Ted Turner is right — Fuck Scorsese! Oh my god (puts head in hands) (lifts them up, after an instant.) 'Scorsese this, Scorsese that, Scorsese says, you know, did you hear what Scorsese thinks? Well, if Martin Scorse—' . . . I know, I know, it's just — see, here's the thing: you know how Richard Linklater blew up the 8mm footage at the end of Slacker? Right — right! So — so! The whole movie's — yes! It goes from 16mm to 35, and that part — right! Goes from — goes from 8mm to 16mm to — right! 35mm . . . (beat.) So, why not, I figure — as, you know, an artistic agenda — shoot in black and white, and then colorize it — "

[CLICK!]

(dial tone.)

[ROLL CREDITS]

THE END . . .

"I believe that if Matthew Brady had had access to color film he would have used it."—joke on colorizing daguerreotypes, from Mark Leyner's Et Tu, Babe (1992)

