

Query

by David Ackley

How many times have I made this trip from mountains to town and back again layering minutes on miles while the road which is the past is swallowed in the mirror and another layer of future gets painted under the wheels and I am only this plane of the present flat and thin as a negative in black and white bearing this image which keeps changing, changing and is nothing but same?

