Three as She Lay Sleeping

by Gary Justis

As I watched her sleep, I saw gentle frost and sun on crystal.

Her hair, impish glances and fragrance above shaded woods. Her warm flesh, in dark hollows, under tree falls; her touch, like a spider's clinging, silken thread...