Silence

by Jill Chan

```
I let go
of my properties,
my work.
```

I let go of this room, its dimensions.

I let go of the dreams of sleep.

I let go of the door, its entering.

I let go of objects, their uses.

I let go of the night, its beauty light.

I let go of the missing, of the way they go.

I let go of wars, the death and scars. I let go of the pain, how it has remained.

I let go of certainty, of how I leave.